Based on the data for May 10, 2024, predictions vary across different asset classes. Commodities and indices show strong predictive accuracy, with 100% correctness in certain directions. However, cryptocurrencies and sectors display less consistent forecasting, particularly in short trading directions. Currency predictions also demonstrate moderate accuracy. Notably, fixed income and geography data are missing. Overall, while some sectors exhibit robust predictive capabilities, others require refinement, suggesting a need for diversified strategies and further analysis to enhance forecasting reliability.

Note: The presented percentages represent the correctness of predictions in each trading direction for the specified date and week. It's essential to note that all forecasts are based on trading signals initiated from the closing time on Friday, closely aligning with the subsequent net Friday's closing time of the New York Stock Exchange. This timeframe provides a comprehensive perspective for evaluating the accuracy of predictions and aligning with the weekly trading cycle.
